A wonderful Christmas time

The Woodberry Down Community Primary School choir opened the annual Woodberry Down Winterfest at the Redmond Centre, bringing the community together

TALENTED youngsters from Woodberry Down Community Primary School kicked off the annual Winterfest celebrations with Christmas songs after the Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, switched on the area's festive lights.

Families enjoyed a free Christmas lunch with their neighbours, while children were entertained with facepainting and music. Residents also got the opportunity to hear about jobs, training opportunities and local activities, and the chance to quiz Council officers about the area's regeneration.

Mayor Glanville said: "It's been an incredible year at Woodberry Down."

BRITANNIA'S NEW WAVE

PROPOSALS for a new, state-of-the-art leisure centre, secondary school and housing on the Britannia Leisure Centre site, in Shoreditch, have been unveiled.

The Council plans include a new school and sixth form – sponsored by the City of London Academy Trust, which runs the highly successful City Academy Hackney – to help provide the 1,650 extra secondary school places Hackney needs by 2021.

The Council also wants to build an improved Britannia Leisure Centre, including a bigger gym, 25 metre swimming pool, learner pool and introduction to water pool – which could include a flume – along with squash courts, a children's soft play area, sports hall and five-a-side pitches. It would also have a cafe and toilets, which would open onto the park.

Parts of the existing leisure centre are over 40 years old, and are coming to the end of their life. Refurbishment options have been discounted due to their estimated cost of £14million.

The new community facilities would be part-funded by the sale of housing built on the site, as the Council receives no Government funding to build leisure facilities, and only limited funding to build new schools.

Residents are being invited to have their say on the proposals. The consultation presents three outline options, all including a brand new leisure centre and secondary school, but with varying numbers of homes that will need to be built in order to fund the development. Two of the options include the provision of affordable housing.

Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, said: "Our proposals for the Britannia site would enable us to fulfil one of our key priorities; to provide a high quality new secondary school and a state-of-the-art leisure centre to benefit future generations of residents.

"This is a major project, and in the absence of sufficient Government funding to pay for it, a lot of work has been put in to find options which are achievable, both practically and financially."

The consultation closes on 12 February 2017.

Haggerston Baths update

THE final shortlist of schemes to redevelop the historic Haggerston Baths has been announced.

Three developers – London and Regional Properties, Castle Forge, and Seaforth Land – have made the final list. Their proposals include a mixture of studios, workshops, cafes, community rooms, live-workspace, arts venues and affordable workspace.

Developers are due to display the proposals next year, when residents will be able to feedback on the schemes through a public consultation process, before a final decision is made. The semi-derelict building was closed in 2000, and costs the Council about £100,000 a year in maintenance and security fees.

Last year the Council asked developers to put forward ideas to take over the building and reopen it to the public. This attracted 29 submissions. Following a public meeting, 10 bidders were invited to make formal proposals. Of the 10 longlisted proposals, there was only one feasible bid that included retaining the swimming pool.

> "We will work with the winning developer to make sure the proposals bring this much-loved building back into use"

Three developers have been shortlisted to redevelop Haggerston Baths

The Council was keen to pursue this opportunity, and spent the best part of this year in negotiations with the developer. However, the gulf between the reassurances that the Council required on implementing the development as proposed – and those the developer was prepared to give – was too great.

The pool complex, which opened in 1904, is included in the Victorian Society's list of the most endangered Victorian and Edwardian buildings in the country.

Historic England and Council conservation officers will have to give consent to any proposals, and will seek to ensure that the historic fabric of the building, and particularly the pool hall, is maintained.

The chosen developer will have to carry out further surveys to determine the full extent of engineering and restoration required, and inform a detailed design and planning submission.

Philip Glanville, Mayor of Hackney, said: "We will arrange a public consultation on the shortlisted proposals in the new year and would be grateful for feedback.

"This is the start of a long process, and we will work with the winning developer to make sure the final proposals bring this much-loved building back into use."

Merry Xmas!

Cast members from Hackney Empire's panto, 'Sleeping Beauty', helped switch on the lights along side The Rollettes of Graeae's Theatre Company

PEOPLE from across Hackney came together for the annual switch-on of the borough's Christmas lights on 27 November.

The joyful evening kicked off this year's Make Hackney Sparkle programme of events, a festive month of free entertainment and activities across the borough.

Hackney Community Choir warmed-up the crowd with Christmas songs, followed by a theatrical spectacular from The Rollettes of Graeae's Theatre Company.

The appearance of the evil Carabosse, playful Ikoboo, and Denzil the Dragon from Hackney Empire's panto, 'Sleeping Beauty', wowed and frightened the crowed in equal measure. The Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Rosemary Sales, then turned on the festive lights alongside the Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville.

Market well done

WELL Street Market launched on 3 December following a successful crowdfunding campaign by local traders and residents to create an innovative community street market.

Mayor of London, Sadiq Khan, and fashion designer, Wayne Hemingway MBE, joined hundreds of residents – plus the Mayor and Speaker of Hackney – at the revived historic market, which sells fresh produce, street food and arts and crafts.

Mayor Sadiq said: "Markets are about people coming together to have a go at making a business and doing something that creates jobs, growth and prosperity."

> "Markets are about people coming together to have a go at making a business"

Mayor Sadiq joined hundreds of residents at Well Street Market

Wayne added: "Markets are a place where people can have a go trading for a small amount of money and can often move onto bigger things. It's the best training ground you could ever get."

Visitors were entertained by local acts and established artists at the market's music stage. Headline act Norman Jay MBE had hundreds of people dancing in the street to his mix of funk, house, soul and disco. Despite the rapidly plummeting temperatures, his closing selection of drum and bass classics had everyone shouting for more when his set finished at 5pm.

Well Street is also home to London's first ever Student Makers' Market where local designers benefit from free stalls and training, and a Teenage Market – where young entrepreneurs can book free stalls.

Well Street Market runs from 9am to 5pm, on the first Saturday of every month. The next two markets are set to take place on 7 January and 4 February.

News in brief

Going full circle with a festive lunch at the White Hart pub

OVER 30 older residents enjoyed a free feast thanks to the staff at the White Hart pub in Stoke Newington.

Treated to a Christmas dinner and all the trimmings, followed by mince pies, the group of residents, all aged over 60 and members of the Council's Hackney Circle scheme, thoroughly enjoyed their lunch out.

Christina Oree, who will be celebrating her 80th birthday on Christmas Day, said: "Thank you very much for inviting me and my daughter Johanah to the Christmas lunch at the White Hart pub. It was swell!

"I never thought it was going to be so nice because I've never been to a pub to celebrate in all the years I've been here."

The Hackney Circle is a free membership scheme for the over-60s. Members are able to enjoy offers from businesses and venues in the borough that they wouldn't otherwise be able to afford, or want to venture into alone.

For more information about the Hackney Circle, and to become a member, call: 020 8356 2919.

Reminder to not get bitten by a loan shark this Christmas

AS the festive season is well underway, the Council is asking residents to think again before borrowing money.

People are being encouraged to be 'debt smart' this Christmas. Examples include comparing deals before committing to borrow, reading the small print and asking any lender to explain the total cost of paying back the money borrowed, as well as any hidden charges.

Those looking to secure loans this Christmas should also be aware of loan sharking, which is an illegal activity that often makes victims' lives a misery.

Borrowers are trapped into spiralling debt by loan sharks who often resort to the most extreme methods such as violence, threats or intimidation to pressure people into paying loans back.

Residents can also speak to London Community Credit Union as they offer savings and loans. They often agree to smaller loans than most high-street banks and are a much cheaper alternative to pay day loans.

Anyone experiencing any financial problems can talk to the Hackney Citizens Advice Bureau on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday from 1pm to 3pm.

Residents can also use The Money Advice Service's online budget planner at: www.moneyadviceservice.org.uk

Youth sport funding open

TALENTED, young local athletes are eligible for a Council grant to help them achieve their sporting goals.

Hackney's Youth Sports Fund has already given over £186,000 towards the development of young athletes since it began in 2007. Indeed, the latest round of funding has supported 13 young people, some of whom have gone on to represent Great Britain and win international medals.

The grants are awarded to young people – aged nine to 23 – with sporting potential, who live or go to school in the borough, to help them pay for specialist coaching, equipment and entering national and international competitions. Funding is also available for community clubs that provide opportunities for young people in sports.

Ruby Davies, 10, from Victoria Park first tried diving on a week-long holiday course at the London Aquatics Centre in the Olympic Park. She successfully applied for a Youth Sports Fund after her pastime turned into something more serious.

Ruby's mother, Karen, said: "Discovering Ruby has a passion and talent for diving was a total surprise to Ruby and my family. While we're happy to support Ruby with her diving, there are lots of costs involved in training, kit, competitions and travel. There's no denying that this award will really help us."

> "I aspire to one day qualify for the Olympic Games. However, as with any sport, support is a big part of achieving goals"

Another Youth Sports Fund recipient, and multiple international medalist in kayaking, Noah Dembele, 17, said: "I have gained valuable experience racing internationally and aspire to one day qualify for the Olympics. However, as with any sport, support is a big part of achieving great goals.

"This is why the backing of my birth borough is so important to help me in my pursuit to have the best possible chance of seeing these dreams realised."

In addition to the grant, thanks to Better – the organisation managing Hackney's leisure centres – any young person who is presented with a gold or silver award will also receive a free, or half price, membership at one of their London leisure centres.

Women's Team GB under-23 rafting team member and sports fund awardee, Vanessa Humphrey, 21, said: "It's great having support from the Youth Sports Fund. It has helped me grow into a better athlete by providing me with new equipment – like quality paddles – to train on harder and bigger water. The funding I have will go towards competition and training fees so I can progress to the premier division in canoe slalom."

Cllr Jon Burke, Cabinet Member for Energy, Sustainability and Community Services, added: "The Hackney Youth Sports Fund provides invaluable opportunities to talented young sports people in the borough. If you are a budding athlete in need of support, apply for a grant today."

The closing date for funding is 16 January.

The Council facilitated 16 days of action as part of the UN's global campaign to help eliminate gender-based violence, hosting a series of free events across the borough

Crackdown on domestic abuse

FIFTY people gathered on the steps of Hackney Town Hall to show their support for the United Nation's 'International Day for the Elimination of Violence Against Women' last month.

Residents joined representatives from Homerton hospital, the police, and Unison, plus wardens, councillors, the Mayor and Speaker of Hackney, and students from Our Lady's Convent High School on 25 November to support Hackney's campaign.

The Council facilitated 16 days of action as part of the UN's global campaign to help eliminate gender-based violence, hosting a series of free events in Youth Hubs, schools and libraries.

Domestic violence rises significantly during the festive period. The combination of financial pressures, free-flowing alcohol and being cooped up in close quarters can exert an additional burden on relationships. In an abusive relationship, this pressure is increased.

A survivor of domestic abuse who was supported by the Council, wants to encourage more women to come forward.

She said: "The Domestic Abuse Intervention Service was excellent. My key worker was great, she connected me with the police and a solicitor, working with me to prepare for court.

"She worked really fast, any time I called she always arranged an appointment for me. She really got me through it all, always listening to me. I feel a lot safer now."

> "The Domestic Abuse Intervention Service was excellent. My key worker was great"

In England and Wales, seven women a month are killed by a current or former partner. Violence against women in London also paints a bleak picture.

In 2015, Met Police figures showed that 25 per cent of all violent crime in the capital was domestic abuse. Nearly 30 per cent of recorded rapes were perpetrated as part of domestic abuse.

Women are much more likely than men to be victims of domestic abuse, and male violence against women accounts for 85 per cent of domestic abuse cases reported to the police.

Last year, there were 2,500 reported incidents of domestic abuse in Hackney, but the real number is believed to be much higher. Tackling domestic abuse and eliminating violence against women is a key priority for the Council.

Despite Government cuts, the Council has increased its spending on domestic abuse services. It tackles gender-based violence in the borough by working with perpetrators to affect permanent behavior change, and through collaborations with third sector partners, the police and health services, to protect victims of abuse and bring perpetrators to justice.

Cllr Rebecca Renninson, Mayoral Adviser on Domestic Abuse, said: "We are making it clear to those experiencing domestic abuse they can come to us for help and making it clear to perpetrators it's not acceptable and we won't stand for it in Hackney.

"Our domestic abuse service is at the forefront of innovative practice, offering an intensive and holistic service and working closely with partner agencies and women's charities to help break the cycle. We want anyone who is experiencing abuse to know that we are here to support them."

Residents, over the age of 16, can contact the Domestic Abuse Intervention Service anonymously to get help.

THE annual Woodberry Down Winterfest returned to the borough, bringing the community closer together as hundreds of residents joined forces to celebrate the end of another year and the festive season.

Crowds at the Redmond Centre, N4, watched as talented youngsters from Woodberry Down Community Primary School sang Christmas songs, following the switching on of festive lights by the Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, on 7 December.

He said: "It's been an incredible year at Woodberry Down and I'm proud of the desperately needed new homes and jobs we're delivering, as well as the new park, public spaces and shops we have seen open.

> "I live here, work here and play here – and I enjoy the community feast every year as a regular

"It was fantastic to join local people to turn on the Christmas lights and hear from the wonderful choir."

Families were then invited to enjoy a delicious free Christmas lunch with their friends and neighbours – accompanied by live music – made up of jerk chicken, macaroni cheese, vegetable curry, coleslaw, sautéd potatoes, seasoned fried chicken and some smooth gravy to top it all off.

Meanwhile children were transformed into superheroes and butterflies with facepaint, before they explored an activity room filled with toys and games, or played in the park outside the centre.

Gloria Obilana, 45, said: "I've lived on the Woodberry Down Estate for over 30 years, I love it. I live here, work here and play here, and I enjoy the community feast every year as a regular. I like to see the community together."

Stalls were also set up to give valuable information about jobs and training opportunities to residents, and the chance to quiz Council officers about the area's regeneration.

Misan Boyo, 18, from Genesis Housing Association, said: "The Winterfest event has been fantastic, it's been fun, and the food's been great – it's been a happy day – basically Woodberry Down is one of Europe's biggest regeneration schemes, with more than 5,500 new modern, high-quality homes being built by a partnership between the Council, Berkeley Homes, Genesis Housing Association and residents.

When completed, the landmark project is set to create three new public parks, two schools and a children's centre, as well as a new library and community centre.

Hundreds of new homes have already been completed during the last year, while Sir David Attenborough opened the stunning Woodberry Wetlands wildlife haven in May – revealing 17 hectares of open water and green space to the public for the first time in nearly 200 years.

La Kwai Thomas, 16, concluded: "Today was a very great day, we had a lot of fun with the children, volunteers and the other staff here."

Turn negatives into positives

By Harriet Worsley

Filmmaker Maxine Chantel likes to explore subjects such as dyslexia, dementia and interracial relationships to target harder-to-reach communities

I CERTAINLY don't make films in order to pay the bills," says Maxine Chantel, chuckling. Her first short – made while still at university – was screened in the House of Commons, and her new feature has just premiered. But, she adds: "I still have a day job as a Resident Liaison Officer. I make films because, even though it's a struggle, it's my dream."

Maxine knows about struggling. She is severely dyslexic, but did not find out until she started university. She explains: "I went up to a student welfare officer and said 'I'm not understanding what I'm reading'. She helped me get diagnosed as dyslexic, and suddenly everything made sense."

As a child she remembers: "Sitting in the corner at primary school, staring out of the window, not understanding a word. My parents were concerned I was not achieving academically. My dad is Nigerian, he didn't known about dyslexia. Generally, there was a lack of awareness."

Maxine appears innately programmed to turn negatives into positives, and decided to make a film about her dyslexia. The resulting half hour documentary-drama was called 'DK Kid'.

It was launched in the House of Commons and circulated around schools and libraries internationally.

"Before that, I had no idea I wanted to be a film maker," says Maxine. Adding: "I wanted to be a gospel singer... but I can't sing! It wasn't until making 'DK Kid' that I realised there was something out there I was good at, something that came naturally to me."

Her second film, 'Ester Bright', was commissioned by black British publishing house Karia Press.

Maxine explains: "It's about an old lady with dementia who's visited by the bailiffs because she has forgotten to pay her bills."

It may sound bleak, but it is not. She says: "I want to make films that are funny, uplifting and inspiring. They are comedies, but they always have to have an issue at their heart, one that's related to ethnic minority communities."

Subjects like dyslexia and dementia appeal to her.

> "I want to make films that are funny, uplifting and inspiring. They are comedies, but they have an issue at their heart"

Curriculum Vitae: Maxine Chantel

1979	Born in Cheshire
2002	Graduates with degree in Media Communications
2004	First film 'DK Kid' released
2006	Gets an MA in Screenwriting
2007	Second film 'Ester Bright' released
2016	Latest film 'Dilemmas' released

She adds: "Because a lot of black and Asian families I know don't really understand what they are. I want to help spread understanding and awareness."

Her latest film, 'Dilemmas', was born of the same instinct.

"My Dad has always said he wanted me to marry someone from his culture. So, I started to explore the idea of interracial relationships and the conflicts between two different cultures. And 'Dilemmas' was born, " Maxine says.

The feature film's tag line describes it as 'about a mixed marriage, prejudice, identity, temptation and finding acceptance'.

It stars 'Birds Of A Feather' actress Linda Robson and leading Nigerian actor, Ken Smart. It was not, however, an easy film to make.

"It took me eight years," says Maxine, adding: "I got so many doors slammed in my face when we looked for funding. Then, once all the actors were signed up and everything was ready to go, I lost my job. I nearly had to tell them all to go home. But the film was rescued by the Hackney community."

'Dilemmas' already had its roots in the borough. Maxine explains: "I was working in Hackney as a Resident Liaison Officer, visiting Council properties around the borough. A friend said to me, 'so you've been to uni, but what are you doing for the community? Why don't you write our story?'"

While doing her day job the film began to build itself around her. She says: "I heard some residents making music and asked if I could use it as the soundtrack. Then, I met the woman who went on to play the mother-in-law in the film. Another resident acted as my assistant producer, and the vicar from St James' Church in Clapton agreed to play herself in the film..."

At the final moment, a local business even came forward with the money needed to start filming.

The film eventually premiered this month. Her future plans include a DVD on dyslexia, called 'Dear Dad,' also set in Hackney.

Maxine says: "We have a lot of talent in Hackney that doesn't get seen. People think because we live in Council properties, we don't have ambition. But they're wrong. I've seen different."

Dreaming of a green Xmas

SIX million Christmas trees stretching from London to the North Pole and back again; enough gift paper to wrap up the island of Jersey; and a billion Christmas cards. The festive season doesn't just produce a lot of happiness, it generates a heap of waste too.

The Council's recycling services mean residents can give the planet a gift however, and minimise the environmental impact of Christmas celebrations.

While the holidays mean there will be changes to residents' rubbish and recycling collections (see page opposite for details), it is still not too late to order extra, free, recycling bags and food waste bins or liners, to tackle the additional five bin bags of waste every household is likely to create.

Some 300,000 tonnes of paper and card is used in UK households during the festive season, but when it comes to presents, most wrapping paper can now be recycled.

The only gift wrap that shouldn't be put in the green bin is foil or glitter varieties. Everything else can be recycled, including paper bags, cards and flattened cardboard boxes.

After Christmas lunch, everything from vegetable peelings, to turkey bones, plate scrapings and leftover pudding can be put in the food recycling waste caddy. It is estimated that 13,350 tonnes of glass will be thrown out, from wine bottles to cranberry sauce jars, so remember to recycle these too.

Of the eight million trees that are bought across the UK, only around 10 per cent are recycled. Yet the Council will collect real ones for free (see opposite page for details), recycling them into compost and wood chippings.

Now is a great time to join almost 8,000 households in the borough and sign up to the Hackney Recycling Rewards scheme, which encourages residents in each ward to throw away less and recycle more.

Rare emerald damselflies spotted in Clissold Park

THE rare willow emerald damselfly – which has never been spotted in inner London before – has been sighted in Clissold Park, N16.

Surveyors working with London Wildlife Trust's Water for Wildlife project spotted a pair of the insects whilst looking for dragonflies and damselflies in Hackney.

Damselflies can be very sensitive to poor water conditions, so their presence at the New River in Clissold Park is an indicator of a healthy micro environment.

Research volunteer, Sonja Todd, said: "As a Hackney resident it's so exciting to discover a species that has never been seen here before."

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, Transport and Parks, added: "It is great to see biodiversity flourishing in Hackney. The borough's green spaces and parks offer an oasis for wildlife in the bustle of inner-city London, such as the willow emerald damselfly, which has never been seen in inner London before."

Businesses come together to tackle poor air quality as part of the Zero Emissions Network

NEARLY 1,000 businesses in Hackney, Islington and Tower Hamlets, have now joined ZEN City Fringe, a network of local companies working together to improve air quality.

Hundreds of members came together at an annual event which showcases everything that the network has to offer, from electric cars, bikes, and scooters to food and drinks transported and served from cargo bikes.

Speaking at the event, Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, formally announced the opening of the City Fringe Low Emissions Neighbourhood. He said: "This project will see this area transformed into an example of everything that London should be striving for. People friendly streets, prioritising low emissions transport and most importantly, clean air."

ZEN City Fringe offers tailored advice, free trials of electric vehicles and cargo bikes, energy consultation and supply chain solutions. Businesses that take part will help the local environment, boost their green credentials, and comply with the latest environmental legislation.

Funded by the Mayor of London, the City Fringe Low Emissions Neighbourhood will feature tree planting, an emphasis on walking and cycling with improved pavements and cycle routes, and parking spaces for the sole use of the cleanest vehicles.

REVIEW

Sleeping Beauty

Until 8 Jan, Hackney Empire, 291 Mare Street, E8 1EJ

AWAKE from your winter slumber and get down to Hackney Empire for a toe-tapping, belly laughing fabulous time… this year's panto, 'Sleeping Beauty' is an absolute Christmas cracker.

Turning this classic fairy tale on its head, creative directors Susie McKenna and Steven Edis have brought a much-needed sprinkling of magic, and escapism, to 2016.

The sleeping heroine, Princess Tahlia (Alexia Khadime), is less a helpless damsel-in-distress waiting for her knight in shining armour to come and rescue her, and more of a Xena Warrior feminist who saves her own Prince Gabriel (Wayne Perrey).

So, if you're reeling from what a shocking year this has been, our advice is this: head down to Hackney Empire for a strong dose of panto therapy and thank God that 2016 is (nearly) behind us.

Hackney pupils have created a short film, called 'Where The Lies Are', to investigate to what degree children are affected by food advertising

The power of ads

STUDENTS from Hackney have hosted a gala premier of their own film, warning young people about the ways in which advertising affects their food choices.

The short film, called 'Where The Lies Are', was shown at Hackney Picturehouse on 26 November and will now be made available online.

Pupils from Our Lady's Convent High School, London Fields Primary, Mossbourne Parkside Academy, and the Petchey Academy worked with local organisation Cordwainers Grow, E9, to investigate to what degree children are affected by food advertising and marketing.

> "We want to put the power to make healthy choices about food back in the hands of our young people"

The students, aged from nine to 14, looked at the strategies used by food companies, marketers and advertisers to target children. They also did their own surveys of 'healthy' food, discovering that the packaging wasn't always what it seemed.

As one pupil, Rachael, said: "When you buy food you should always check the back, and not the front, because that's where all the lies are."

In addition to the film, the project is also giving rise to new research. Dr Frances Hansford, a researcher specialising in food and nutrition, interviewed and observed the students to find out whether they changed their own food habits in the course of the project. Her evaluation will be published in the new year.

The film follows the release of statistics by the UK's National Child Measurement Programme, which revealed that 41 per cent of children, aged 10 and 11, in Hackney are overweight or obese.

Natalie Mady, Co-Director and Founder of Cordwainers Grow, said: "We want to put the power to make healthy choices about food back in the hands of our young people.

"We're not pointing the finger at children and telling them what to eat. They are discovering the different pressures that the strategies of the food industry create, so they have information when deciding what to eat."

News in brief

Be bright and stay in sight

PUPILS from St Paul's with St Michael's Church of England Primary School, near London Fields, have dressed in their brightest clothing to raise awareness of road safety during the winter months.

Since the clocks went back on 30 October, it has been much darker in the mornings and evenings, when people travel to and from school and work.

As a result, children from the E8 school wore their brightest clothing last month, with two pupils even donning fairy lights.

Hackney's 'Be Bright, Stay In Sight' campaign encourages pedestrians and cyclists to wear clothes and use accessories that help them to be seen in the dark by other road users.

The best colours to be seen during the daytime are bright and fluorescent. Lighter colours are more noticeable in the dark, and anything with reflective material will show up in the headlights of vehicles and street lights.

Access to computer science

YOUNG students are learning coding and computer science thanks to a new national initiative.

Brand new desktop computers from the company pi-top have been sent to IntoUniversity's learning centres across the country, including the Hackney South centre on Livermere Road, E8.

Pi-top co-founder and CEO, Jesse Lozano, said: "Our goal is essentially to change the way people learn and make science, technology, engineering and maths learning accessible to students no matter what their background. Right now, there is a skills gap that means hundreds of thousands of computer-based jobs go unfilled in the UK every year."

The Hackney South centre opened in 2010 and works with schools in the surrounding area. Student Hasan Raffi, 11, said: "Computing is very important. It provides a network that allows us access to anything."

Pupils get to the very core of pain relief as part of a 'Tech in Health' day

Students Peter and Casano from Cardinal Pole Catholic School

HACKNEY students have collaborated with technicians to help create devices to help those in chronic pain.

Pupils from Cardinal Pole Catholic School and Petchey Academy were part of a 'Tech in Health' day staged by CORE, the Centre for Osteopathic Research and Excellence. On 30 November, Year 8, 9 and 10 students took a workshop to learn about new health technologies, including artificial eyes for the blind and robotic exoskeletons to help people walk.

The students then spent a day using brand new technology donated by the BBC to try to build their own devices that could monitor and alleviate pain.

Casano Kirlew, from Cardinal Pole, said: "It was really fun. I want to work in some sort of technology department, as I find it really interesting."

Danny Orchard, co-founder of CORE, added: "We hope to inspire the next generation to focus on technological solutions to help pain reduction."

Bright futures

Aged 18-25 and want to work in the creative industry? Apply for free training with the Arcola Theatre's brand new YourFuture scheme

A FREE programme has launched in the borough, giving talented young people real experience in the creative industries.

The 'YourFuture' scheme matches 50 young people with 25 local businesses which can nurture their talent. Those taking part will work on real commercial projects, in creative fields including graphic design, photography, animation, fine art and advertising.

Jonny Weston, Project Leader on the scheme, said: "In order to gain work and thrive in business, creative young people need three things: relevant skills training, real contracts and mentoring.

> "Creative young people need three things: relevant skills training, real contracts and mentoring"

This project delivers all three simultaneously, again demonstrating that Hackney is leading the way in employability efforts."

The project has been developed by the design studio It's Like This, in partnership with the Arcola Theatre. It follows a pilot in 2014, in which 10 young people were matched with local businesses and reported increased confidence in their abilities.

Interested participants need to be aged between 18 and 24, and hold a minimum of NVQ Level 2 in graphic design, fine art, web design, illustration, web development, animation, videography, media and communication or photography.

Once matched with a business, they will be mentored by an experienced business leader to complete a project which can be added to a CV or portfolio.

Nick Connaughton, Creative Engagement Manager at the Arcola Theatre, said: "Experience is key. Job seekers might find work soon after finishing their studies, but often lack the key skills to make that a success. This project will equip more creative young people to do just that."

Applications close on 23 December.

Make a child's Xmas magical

HOXTON Hall and national children's charity Barnardo's are working together to give disadvantaged children a magical Christmas.

Together with the Council, the charity has identified families across North and East London who would not normally be able to have a festive treat and would benefit from a visit to the theatre.

Hoxton Hall is asking customers booking tickets to any of its shows during the Christmas period to purchase an extra one for a child in need at a cost of £10, or to sponsor a family for £50. One-off donations to the Families Christmas Panto Fund can also be made without purchasing tickets.

For more info, visit: www.hoxtonhall.co.uk; or call the box office on: 020 7684 0060.

Improved results for young people in Youth Justice system

YOUNG people in the youth justice system are getting a much needed boost to their prospects, thanks to the help of a speech and language therapist.

Research shows that up to 90 per cent of young people in the youth justice system have speech, language and communication needs. Within the general population however, this is around 10 per cent.

This can have a negative effect on the rehabilitation process leading to frustration, low attendance and attainment levels in educational settings.

Over the last 18 months however, all those going through the Youth Justice system in Hackney have had one-to-one support from a speech and language therapist.

This has seen engagement with criminal orders increase substantially, with 80 per cent of those leaving Youth Justice now in full time education or training. For more info, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/youth-justice

Clapton Girls' pupil selected for women's under-16 England squad

A HACKNEY teenager has been chosen to join the England Basketball Squad and represent both the borough and country in international sporting events.

Following an under-16s tournament in Manchester in September, Greenhouse Pioneers player and Clapton Girls' Academy student, Jade Guidolin-Duncan was selected to play for the women's under-16 England Squad.

Jade said: "I am very excited to be chosen. Last year, I missed out on selection, so I am very grateful to be given a second chance."

Jade first discovered her passion for basketball during school PE lessons and extra-curricular clubs, and started playing in Year 7.

She has also competed in national league basketball, at both under-14 and under-16 level, for the past three years with London Greenhouse Pioneers.

Her coach, Fe Keown, said: "I am delighted at Jade's success in gaining selection for the England squad.

"I look forward to seeing her continued development as she has lots to offer both on and off the court."

Clapton Girls' Academy Headteacher, Anna Feltham, added: "We are exceptionally proud to have a Clapton Girls' Academy student chosen for the Women's under-16 England Basketball Squad. Well done Jade!"

Living years

Lilian John, 94, a patient at St Joseph's Hospice, with some of the other choir members. They are outside Abbey Road Studios, where they have recorded 'The Living Years' in the hope it will become Christmas No 1

A 94-year-old great-great grandmother is taking on the music industry in a bid to become Christmas number one.

Lilian John, a patient at St Joseph's Hospice, is part of a 300-strong choir representing 18 London hospices. The choir has recorded a cover of 'The Living Years' by Mike + The Mechanics. Paul Carrack, the lead vocalist on the original 1991 track, also features on the new version.

Paul said: "The Living Years has been an important song for me for many years, but this is the version that means the most. Recording it with this incredibly special group of people for such a worthwhile cause has created some kind of magic.

"It's a powerful and inspiring track, and I hope that everyone gets behind it this Christmas."

The choir made their single at the world famous Abbey Road Studios and even shot an accompanying video under the direction of top Hollywood film director Annabel J Jankel.

Lilian said: "I have been given a new lease of life being part of the London Hospices Choir. St Joseph's Hospice has been like a family to me, and now I feel like I am part of a huge extended family with 300 people all wanting to give something back to these wonderful places.

"Please help me and this amazing choir get to number one this Christmas so we can help support the amazing work of these wonderful hospices."

All profits from the sale of the single will be divided between the 18 hospices involved, helping them to support those reaching the end of their lives. 'The Living Years' by The London Hospices Choir and Paul Carrack is set to be released on 16 December.

Awards for health workers

HACKNEY health workers scooped three prizes at an NHS staff award ceremony.

The East London NHS Foundation Trust (ELFT) awards take place annually to recognise the outstanding contributions made by teams and individuals working within the trust. This year, the event took place on 25 November at The Troxy, in Tower Hamlets.

Bernice Allan, who works in Forensic Services in Hackney, won the prestigious Chief Executive Award. Presenting her with the award, ELFT's Chief Executive, Dr Navina Evans, praised her 'amazing, awesome and thoughtful' attitude.

Other Hackney winners included the Forensic Self-Catering Quality Improvement Team, which got the Improvement to Quality of Service Award; and Sandra Stewart, who was made Employee of the Year. Sandra, who is a nurse working in the City and Hackney Clozapine Clinic, works with schizophrenic patients and was praised for her exceptional dedication.

Xmas mental health support

CHRISTMAS can be an overwhelming time of year for many people, but especially those who suffer from mental health problems.

The East London NHS Foundation Trust is reminding residents that they are not alone this festive season, and help is available for anyone in Hackney and the City of London who needs assistance in a crisis over the holidays.

There are three main ways of getting the appropriate support: by calling the free and confidential City and Hackney 24-hour mental health crisis helpline on: 020 8432 8020; popping into the walk-in Crisis cafe at 15a Homerton Row, next to Homerton hospital, from 6-9pm, Monday to Thursday, and from 12noon-4pm, on Saturdays; and contacting the Service User Network (SUN) online at: www.nsun.org.uk

Bronze for Hackney's over-50s in the Better Club Games

Hackney's over-50s team, which took bronze in the Better Games

AN 88-year-old bowling fan is among the team of over-50s who have brought a bronze medal home to Hackney.

Irene Lewington represented the borough in short mat bowls at this year's Better Club Games, an annual event that aims to encourage older people to get more active to improve their mental and physical health.

Participants from 21 boroughs took part in the event, held last month at the Copper Box Arena in Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park. Organised by leisure centre provider GLL, sporting events included badminton, short tennis, swimming, timed cycling and even dominoes, in which Hackney took first place. The results totted up, Greenwich was awarded the gold medal, while Epsom Ewell took silver, and Hackney bronze.

Trophies were presented by special guests including Olympic swimmer and gold medalist Duncan Goodhew and Rio 2016 Taekwondo silver medallist Lutalo Muhammed.

Irene said: "I thoroughly enjoyed the day. I play regularly at Kings Hall Leisure Centre, which helps me stay active and healthy."

Winter beef stew

Serves 5

Preparation time
15 mins

Cooking time
5 hours

Ingredients

- 2 sticks of celery
- 2 large carrots
- 1 onion
- 5 bay leaves
- 3 sprigs of thyme
- 1 large tbsp butter
- 2 tbsps cornflour
- 75ml Worcestershire sauce
- Beef stock
- 850g diced beef
- 100g (approx) tomato puree
- Caraway seeds
- Salt and pepper, to taste.

Method

- Roughly dice celery, carrots and onions to about the same size
- Heat a pan (to 180°C) and add vegetables. When the vegetables start to sweat, add the thyme, bay leaves and caraway seeds
- Once the onions are translucent, stir in the tomato puree and cook for approximately 5 minutes
- Add the butter and slowly reduce the heat (to about 140°). Add the Worcestershire sauce
- In a separate pan, prepare a beef stock by mixing water with a beef stock pot or gravy granules. Add the cornflour and continue to whisk while it is over the heat
- Strain the stock through a fine sieve so there are no lumps and add it to the vegetables. Season with salt, pepper and any other preferred spices
- Add the diced beef. The liquid should just cover the meat and vegetables
- Slow cook on the hob, or in the oven, between 120°C-140°C for 3-4 hours until the beef is tender and the sauce has thickened
- Serve and enjoy. This dish is perfectly complemented by dumplings or a hunk of bread.

Waterhouse - through Blue Marble Training - supports young people across the borough towards careers in the restaurant industry. Owned by Shoreditch Trust, income from this enterprise goes back into training programmes across the borough. Waterhouse in Orsman Road, N1, is open Mon to Fri, 9am - 3pm. Evenings and weekends available for large bookings and private events.

Have your say on the future of Hackney's housing hubs

THE Council is considering changing the way residents are able to access housing services.

Currently, it offers face-to-face services in five neighbourhood offices and Christopher Addison House, behind Hackney Town Hall. However, fewer residents are choosing to use these offices, with more people preferring to access services remotely.

As a result, the Council wants to: reduce the number of neighbourhood housing offices from six to three and expand these remaining offices, including creating an improved housing counter service at Christopher Addison House; make more housing services available online; provide self-service terminals in the proposed enlarged housing offices and at libraries around the borough; and provide estate officers with the technology to do mobile working so they can bring housing services to residents.

Cllr Clayeon McKenzie, Cabinet Member for Housing Services, said: "We understand this may affect some people with reduced mobility, or those with no access to the internet, so our proposals include ensuring more staff are available to undertake home-visits."

The Council would like to hear residents' views on the proposals. All Council tenants and leaseholders will receive a consultation document in the post, which outlines the options in more detail.

Residents can also have their say online at: www.hackney.gov.uk/housing-get-involved; by e-mailing: consultation@hackney.gov.uk; or calling: 020 8356 3330.

The consultation closes on 3 February.

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by residents and serve for four years. The last borough-wide elections took place in May 2014.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee Council services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR PHILIP GLANVILLE

Hackney's executive Mayor Philip Glanville, was directly elected by the borough in September 2016. He is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. The Mayor holds monthly casework surgeries in the Town Hall. To book an appointment, email: mayor@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 3220. Residents are first encouraged to contact their ward councillor. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney who is chosen annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Rosemary Sales.
